Frederick di Georgiou (pianist)

Frederick di Georgiou studied piano at the Conservatory in Rome, at the Mozarteum in Salzburg and at the Julliard School in New York. As an infant prodigy he performed as soloist in different Orchestras. In the USA he worked as solo pianist at world famous hotels in Las Vegas, Lake Tahoe, New York and Atlantic City.

From 1980 to 1982 he was pianist for Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett. He also accompanied Diana Ross and Tom Jones, Luciano Pavarotti and Julio Iglesias.

Now he works as Musical Director in the "Brenner's Park Hotel" in Baden-Baden, Germany, where he has organized the popular "That's Entertainment" concerts with various jazz and classical artists and his string quartett, founded 1996.

At the age of 7 he won awards at the Cherubini School of Music in Rome, Italy. At the age of 12 he won awards at the Ethnikon Odion (National) Music Academy in Athens, Greece. Later he performed as Guest soloist with Athens Philharmonic Orchestra (conductor Andreas Paridis), he then obtained a Kalomere Scholarship - 18 months intensive study at the Mozarteum, Salzburg, Austria. This was followed by a Music Youth Scholarship at the Brussels Conservatory, in Belgium. In 1968 he obtained a Master's degree for classical piano (the first student to be awarded a Gold Medal.

He has performed as guest soloist with:- Salzburger Symphonics, Vienna Chamber Orchestra, Athens Philharmonics, Athens Chamber Orchestra, and the Berliner Philharmonics. In Austria, France, Greece and Belgium he has appeared in radio and television. Aristoteles Onassis, in Skorpis, Greece, employed him as his private pianist.

He has been the Music Director of various radio and television shows in Europe and Assitent Director of Music for Greek National Television. He is the Leader of the "Olympians", an eight-, and later sixteen-piece orchestra, which has travelled around the world with various cruises and shows.
